4. Which is the better form of address, Mr. John Smith?

John Smith?

1. The bridal party should leave the house in the following order: In the first carriage the bride and her father; in carriages that follow, the bridemaids. Members of the family usually precede the bridal party to the church. At the church the ushers head the bridal party to the altar; the bridemaids usually come next, and then the maids of honor, but commonly there are not both bridemaids and maids of honor. Then comes the bride upon the arm of her father or elder relative. The natural place of the maid or maids of honor if there are also bridemaids, would be after the bride, but individual taste and preferences govern these detalls, very few marriages being in all particu-lars alike. The groom and best man enter from the vestry and stand at the altar, the groom in readiness to receive the bride from her father's hand. The bridemaids take their place at the side of the bride, and the maids of honor behind her. After the ceremony, the bride and groom lead the procession out. 2. If it is desired to exclude all but invited guesta, cards of admission must be issued. Print on the card the name of the church and date and hour of the ceremony. S. For each married couple in a family one invitation may be sent.
Each single adult member of the family should receive an invitation. 4 "Mr. and Mrs. John Smith," always. "Mr. John Smith and wife,"

Will you kindly favor me with the benefit of your advice on the following: I I am about to be married and shall send announcements out to my friends whom I hope will call upon me, but being engaged in a business which makes my evenings at home very uncertain my wire, who is a perfect stranger, will have to entertain. How ought the announcements to be worded-should it be "at home" or "residence?" 2 Knowing mere than one person in a family should I send an announcement to each person or to the head of the house only; and in case of ladies whose mothers I am not acquainted with, to whom should I send? & How soon after receiving these calls should we return them? 4 If a person on whom you have called gave a large reception to whom every Tom, Dick and Harry was invited and ralied to invite you, would you assume that he desired to cease the acquaintance? 5. I was censured a few evenings ago after a public funner because I used my fingers in eating Saratogo chips, which appeared to me to be the only satural mode of eating them, was I wreng? 6. Referring again to the subject of famouncements, what is done in the case of business relations? I am not acquainted with the wives of many of my associates. Should I address to the gentleman only?

JOHN HALIFAL.

 The circumstances you mention should not alter the form of the invitation. You issue your eards "At Home," giving place and time, and this is all. 2 To each adult person (counting married couples as one), it would be proper and graceful to include the mothers of the ladies under such circumstances. 3. Z. How should a lady congratulate her sister and brother-in-law upon their marriage?

A. E. G.

1. Of course the lady should thank him. It would be exceedingly ill-bred not to do so. It is underbred to accept any service or any blad.

If an invitation for the theater comes from the gentleman it is proper and customary for him to pay for the tickets. But when an invitation comes from a lady, which may sometimes happen, it is proper for her to furnish the

1. Is it very improper at a dinner to cut green salad, such as lettuce or chicory? It seems to me almost necessary. 2. When cheese is served as a distinct course, how is it to be eaten? Is it considered the proper thing here, to put a piece on each bite of bread, as the French do? 3. At a boarding bouse or hotel should the gentle man rise, when a lady leaves the table.

BOARDER. BOARDER.

BOARDER.

1. Lettuce or chicory loses its quality by being out. Therefore a knife abould not be used unless necessary. 2. Cheese is not usually served as a separate course, but if it is, it may be eaten, we suppose, in the manner mentioned. But cheese is commonly served with or after coffee, accompanied by crackers. It is the one article that way he esten with a knife according to the control of the control article that may be eaten with a knife, according to some authorities. A small piece is taken upon the end of a silver blade and neatly carried to the mouth. 3. Mr. Frank Mayb is one of the best actors of his time. An additional interest is attached to this performance in the first appearance here of Miss Marie Burrisa, of this city, an accomplished and an attractive lady who adopted the stage as a profession, and after but short experience has won for herself a good place and attracted universal attention and praise. She is gifted with a fine face and commanding presence, and writers in different cities have noted that in appearance and manner she suggests Miss Mary Anderson. Miss Burriss has played a number of leading characters and received great critical commendation for force, judgment and delicacy. She is to play Eleanor Vaughn on Monday night. The cast throughout is a good one, and the many fine opportunities which the drama presents for picturesque and dramatic beauties will be made the most of in the present revival at the Bijou. Harris Theater and the Academy of Music will not shut down until the hot weather sets in, and then presumably only for the brief vacation usually taken.

Mr. Shedden is coming back to sound health slowly but surely. It would have been very unfortunate for the Bijou Theater as well as for him if this sudden prostration had prevented him from resumnny his place in the management of a theater, as is the case at the Bijon, but is certainly only just to say that Mr. Shedden contributed by his judgment in booking, by the use of his rare personal qualities of courtesy and intuitive intelligence in handling the public and theatrical people, not a little to the wonderful success of the Bijou during the public and theatrical people, not a little to the wonderful success of the Bijou during the public and theatrical people, not a little to the wonderful success of the Bijou during the public and theatrical people, not a little to the wonderful success of the Bijou during the public and theatrical people, not a little to the wonderful success of the Bijou during the bast season. Mr. Gullek has been fortunate in his choice of Mr. Shedden as his licutenant, and it is pleasant to be able to state that Mr. Shedden will be able to return to his post in time to attend to his work for next season.

FRANKLIN'S FIRST PAPER.

A Rure Publication Shown at a Loan Exhibit-A Few Extracts. At the Centennial Loan Exhibition Revolutionary Relics, says the Chicago News, is a copy of the first paper by Benjamin Franklin. It is the issue of the New England Courant of February 11, 1723, published in Boston.

James Franklin, an elder brother, was the owner of the paper, and Benjamin was an articled apprentice. James had printed articles that made some tart criticism of the Colonial Government and had been arrested and the publication of his sheet forbidden. and the publication of his sheet forbidden. It became necessary to shift the responsibility of its publication to prevent a seizure and possibly a confiscation of the property. So in this issue of the little three-column single sheet, about 14 by 18 inches, James Franklin announces that:

"The late Publisher of this Paper, finding so many inconveniences would arise by his carrying the Manuscripts and publick News to be supervised by the Secretary as to render his carrying it on improfitable, has intifely dropt the Undertaking."

in."

Benjamin was only 16 years old, but he had aiready written a few articles in a disguised hand which were so good that his brother had published them and the Government had taken offense at the sentiments expressed. When James discovered the author he beat him, and a few months later another quarrel led to Benjamin running away to New York.

away to New York.

In the face of the announcement that the publisher had "dropt the Undertaking," the following advertisement appeared. Possibly it was the work of the new publisher of the paper:

This Paper having met with so general a Acceptance in Town and Country as to require a far greater Number of them to be printe than there is of the other Publick Papers, and it being besides more generally reed by a van Number of Borrowers who do not take it it the publisher thinks proper to give this Pullick Notice for the Incouragement of the who would have Advertisements inserted it the publick Prints, which they may have printed in this Paper at a moderate Price.

field and staff of each regiment was also al-lowed by the State, and on the whole the trip was most satisfactory. What probably pleased the men most was the treatment given them by the people of the metropolis, making such a remarkable contrast with that received at Washington. Washington.

New York demonstrated one thing, and that is that the Pennsylvania regiments are not in love with the new flag recently issued to them. As the troops came marching up Broadway, it could be seen that nearly every regiment had its old colors with them. The new flag was carried, for it came from the authorities, but the old ones were there too. The old flag, by the way, is an odd one, It has the red and white stripes and the blue field of the national solors, but in the field is the State cont-of-arms surrounded by stars; therefore it is neither national nor Bate.

The design of General Wastings in composi-

THE design of General Hastings in compelling the Pennsylvania Guard to parade in heavy marching order in New York City last Tuesday although it was a mild day and all the troops from other States were in light order, is now apparent to everybody. It has been the hobby of General Hastings for years to have a dress uniform for the Guard of this State, and it seems as if his expectations were should to be tuifilled. Our regiments certainly suffered greatly in appearance when brought in contact with the fancy uniforms of New York and the New England States, and the men who could remedy that fault, the members of the Pennsylvania Legislature, were present to note the difference. It is safe to say it will be a year before the dress uniform will be in shape for issue and use, and it is a question whether much of a display sould be made for the proposed amount, $15,000, or $10 per man. Should the proposed amendment ge through, Generals Wiley and Gouin and most of the division officers would favor the same uniform all over the State, but as severafor the First Brigade regiments are already provided with individual dresses, and as many of the other organizations would like to revive their distinctive uniforms by which they were formerly known, the latter plan would most probably be adopted. ithough it was a mild day and all the troop
